Approved For Release 2000/09/01: CIA-RDP82-00357R000700120008-8

FEDERAL TIMES 27 September 1967

SENATE APPROVES ERVIN 'RIGHTS' HILL

"Nothing contained in this act shall be construed to prohibit an officer of the Central Intelligence Agency or of the National Security Agency or of the FRI from requesting any civilian employee or applicant to take a polygraph test, or to take a psychological test, designed to elicit from him information concerning his personal relationship with any person connected with him by blood or marriage, or concerning his religious beliefs or practices, or concerning his attitude or conduct with respect to menual matters, or to provide a personal financial statement, if the director of the Central Intelligence Agency or his designee or the director of the National Security Agency or his designee or the director of the FRI or his designee makes a personal finding with regard to each individual to be so tested or examined that such test or information is required to protect the national security."